

A problem I have encountered with cycling...

Impromptu or over-optimistic shopping. My large panier is often already more than half-full, and sometimes my shopping is unplanned, or I end up buying more than I have capacity for, despite an emergency bungee which goes everywhere with me (for securing items to the bike rack)

How I solved it... (the bikers rucksack, the jacksack, the pack-a-sack?)

I haven't yet, but here's my idea. Why not combine the function of rucksack and bike jacket? I envisage this as a double-skinned jacket (double skin on the back) with a zip and side panels which allow the creation (when unzipped) of an extra large pocket (rucksack) — but in normal jacket use is just a jacket with an extra zip, normal size. Could have extra zipper sections / design features too!

Jacket back with zip

Jacket in profile

Thanks for entering — Encourage your friends to enter too! Details also at: www.spokes.org.uk

ENTRY NO.23