

Spring Public Meeting : all welcome : Weds 13 June

City Centre Transformation!

Edinburgh City's Transformation Project aims to “prioritise access for pedestrians, cyclists and public transport users” in the city centre.

Glasgow City's Connectivity Commission seeks to “get more people onto public transport, walking and cycling” in the city centre.

Both see these transport measures as central to an improved public realm, creating a city centre more attractive for business and leisure.

- ◆ What transport changes will we see in practice? - and when?
- ◆ What will be the role of cycling as a transport mode?
- ◆ What happens to the cars?
- ◆ What can the cities learn from each other - and from other cities?
